FROM INDIANA PEOPLE.

A number of Indianapolis gentlemen who are interested in the project to organize committee for the relief of the India famine sufferers met in the assembly room of the Commercial Club yesterday afternoon. It is proposed to organize a committee of 100 or more representative men in the State to co-operate with a like number in New York.

Frank H. Levering, who has been doing missionary service in India, and who knows thoroughly the condition of the sufferers, was present and addressed the meeting, outlining the plans on which the work of the New York committee is carried on. Mr. Levering is away from his post of duty in India on leave of absence. He is spending the most of his time in Lafayette, but has agreed to be in Indianapolis whenever his services are needed. He will probably divide his time between the two cities. Mr. Levering will act as the secretary of the ittee, and said yesterday that he would expect no compensation for his labors, as he is given an allowance while away from duty by the society which he represents as a missionary. Henry Eitel, of the Union Trust Company, will be the treasurer for the committee, and all contributions may be sent to him. It is proposed to have a number of Indiana cities represented on the committee. It will be the plan to address appeals to individuals over the State and have them interest their friends in the work. It is also the purpose to get the different young people's societies of the churches interested.

BRILLIANT MILITARY CAREER

GEN. M'GINNIS WON HONOR AND FAME IN TWO WARS.

The Commission Will Be Issued as a Satisfactory Bond Is Given.

Gen. George F. McGinnis was appointed by the President, late yesterday afternoon, postmaster of Indianapolis. The appointment had for several days been awaiting the return of the President to Washington. When seen at his house last night by a Journal reporter General McGinnis had not been officially notified of his appointment, but said that he had been apprised of the fact that the matter was to be brought be-Senator Fairbanks was notified of the appointment late yesterday. The general said he could not say just when he would take charge of the postoffice, but added that he hoped to do so by the 1st of August. Before he obtains his commission it will be necessary for him to execute a bond that will be satisfactory to the department at Washington. If the bond is satisfactory the commission will be Grilles carefully designed for the known citizens of this city and State. He | & Franklin and the Union Traction comis a veteran of the Mexican and civil wars, ment of Ohio Volunteers. In 1852 he removed from Chillicothe to Indianapolis, where he has since made his home. Being a hatter by trade, he at once opened a hatter's shop on coming to this city. He occupied a room on the site which is now oc- leying. cupied by the jewelry house of Julius Walk & Son. Later he moved his business to the place now occupied by the Bowen-Merrill Book Company.

A GOLD HUNTER. In 1859, when the Pike's Peak gold excitement broke out, he joined a party of prospectors and went to Colorado. He had but little success there and returned home a short while before the civil war broke out. It was at this time that he made an unsuccessful race as a Democratic candidate for city treasurer. When hostilities between the North and South seemed unavoidable he declared himself a war Democrat and gave his support to the Union. Upon the issuing of Lincoln's proclamation calling for 75,000 troops General McGinnis, who had previously been connected with one of the indepenent military companies of Indianapolis, promptly enlisted as a private in Company K, Eleventh Indiana Volunteer Infantry, for the three months' service. This was on April 15, 1861. The next day, his military experience being recognized, he was commissioned captain in that regiment, and on April 25, 1861, was commissioned lieutenant colonel. The colonel was Lew Wallace, who recognized that in the officer next in command he had a stlent, modest man upon whom he could rely in any emergency. On Sept. 3, 1861, he suc ceeded to the colonelcy of the Eleventh in place of Colonel Wallace, who had been made a brigadier general. From that time until the close of the service he was known to the men whom he commanded as "Pap" McGinnis. On May 2, 1863, he was commissioned brigadier general and was mustered four years, four months and nine days. DISTINGUISHED SERVICES. As colonel of the Eleventh Indiana he did distinguished service in the battle that resulted in the surrender of Fort Lonelson to the Union troops on Feb. 15, 1862 Many of the prisoners taken at Donelson-Kentuckians, Tennesseeans and Mississippians-were sent to this city and were confined for some time at Camp Morton, on the site of what is now Morton Place General McGinnis participated in many campaigns. He did good service at the batle of Shiloh, in which his regiment engaged the enemy on the 7th of April, 1862, from 5:30 a. m. until 4:30 p. m. On April 6, 1863, General McGinnis, commanding a brigade in General Hovey's division, is credited with having saved the day by notable gallantry and skill in one of the sharpest battles of the war. This was the battle of Champion's Hill, in which the Eleventh Indiana last 167 men in killed out of service Aug. 24, 1865, having served

wounded and missing. From the time he entered the service in April 1861, he has been an ardent Republican and his old-time Democratic friends have thought none the less of him on that account. Many offers of good places on the Democratic ticket were made to him at the close of the war, but to all such he answered that he had ceased to be a Democrat and had become a Republican believing that to be the party to settle the questions growing out of the war.

WAS COUNTY RECORDER. The only elective office he ever held was that of recorder of Marion county soon after the close of the war. He has also been mentioned several times for postmaster, notably when President Harrison anpointed the late James A. Wildman. He was again mentioned for the place after the death of William Wallace, who was succeeded by Edward P. Thompson, and some of his friends were again active in his behalf after the election of McKinley. General McGinnis's reputation for honesty and integrity made him for several years a favorite with lawyers having probate business in hand, and he served as administrator of a number of estates. He has recently been connected with two or three building associations. He and his wife a short while ago celebrated their golden wedding. He is now seventy-four years old. He is a member of a number of soldier organizations, among them the Indiana Commandery of the Loyal Legion. in which he has served as commander.

B. AND L. DELEGATES

Will Swarm About the City Part of Next Week.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week the State and United States Leagues of Local Building Associations will hold their annual convention in this city. The sessions will be held in Room 12 of the Statehouse. The first meeting will be that of the State League at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. From fifty to sixty delegates, representing local associations in Indiana, are expected to be present. The morning session will be devoted to the reading of papers, and election of officers will be held in the afternoon. The present officers are: Charles A. Bookwalter, president; A. L. Gutheil, of Shelbyville, secretary, and A. A. Young, of Indianapolis, treasurer. Mr. Bookwalter is not in the race for re-election, expecting to retire permanently from building associations. The meeting of the United States League will be held Wednesday and Thursday. Delegates from local associations in most of the States are expected. A paper will be read by Carroll D. Wright, chief of the United States Bureau of Statistics, showing the percentage of the country's popula-tion belonging to building associations, together with other relevant matters. The only Indiana delegate who will read a paper before the national convention will be STRANGE STORY OF WILL Charles N. Thompson, who is the State League's attorney. The president of the national league is Thomas J. Fitzmorris, editor of the Omaha Bee, and the secretary is H. F. Callarius, of Cincinnati. It is expected that 125 delegates will be in attendance. Among the social features of the convention will probably be an electric car ride Wednesday evening.

Should an emergency arise, or Commissioner Greer refuse to carry out his part of the morning programme, Commissioner McGregor has volunteered his services. BROUGHT TO LIGHT THROUGH COM-MUNICATION WITH A SPIRIT,

A Case of Absorbing Interest Appealed from Clinton Circuit Court to Supreme Tribunal.

Spiritualism is derided by most people and there are many who will scarcely listen missions to Fred W. Martin, captain; to a discussion of its pretensions. Yet this belief, religion, cult or whatever one may see fit to term it, despite the obloquy and abuse which have been heaped upon it, figures very largely in a case which will be Adolph H. Kruse, Oliver I. Alton and filed within a few days in the State's most Hiram A. Hopkins were commissioned in august and dignified tribunal-the Supreme

The case referred to originated in the Circuit Court, at Frankfort, and was brought by the Frankfort Commandery, Knights Templars, against Mrs. Isaac Miller, for the 18, from the Indianapolis arsenal; 30,000 purpose of recovering a portion of her first pasters, ordered from Frankfort arsenal, Philadelphia, and a large number of paper husband's large estate, alleged to have been targets from the Rock Island arsenal. It | bequeathed to the commandery by the deis expected the above ordnance will be cedent, in a will which was not brought to light until long after his death. The story of the lost will is as unique and entertaining as any to be found in the realms of fiction, yet its truth is established by the fact that it is gleaned from the cold, matter-of-fact pages of a legal transcript. One of the early residents of the city of Frankfort, Ind., was Hiram H. Bradley, who possessed such business sagacity that he succeeded in amassing a fortune of something like $40,000. His family consisted of two boys, one girl and his wife, the latter dying of consumption some years before her liege lord. The children died before their mother. A woman was brought from Lafayette to nurse Mrs. Bradley during her last illness, and, as many such cases eventuate, Mr. Bradley was fatally smitten with the nurse's charms and married her, after having mourned his wife's death a becoming length of time. Bradley house of worship. There are about one and his new life partner resided in Frankfort until the former's death.

> life was the study and 'practice of Freemasonry. He frequently declared to friends that he intended to leave a goodly portion of his fortune to the Masonic lodge of the city of his residence. In due time Mr. Bradley was "gathered to fathers,' and his widow paid his memory the perfunctory show of re spect which he had bestowed upon that o his former spouse. Like her deceased lord Mrs. Bradley seemed afflicted with the 'matrimonial mania," and, within a few months, was joined in the holy bonds of wedlock to a young man named Miller, also a resident of Frankfort. Availing themselves of the golden store so kindly left by Mr. Bradley, the pair betook themselves to California on a honeymoon tour. On their return to Frankfort they built a substantial residence in the very heart of the district which is held sacred to Frankfort's "four as a marriage bell. Now comes the "rift in the lute" of their unalloyed happiness. A little less than a year ago there ap peared in the beautiful little city of Frankfort two members of the despised cult of spiritualism. They were mediums, whose method of communication with departed spirits was through a trumpet. So thoroughly was their telephonic line with the underworld established that the tones of spirit voices traveling over it could readily distinguished one from another and friends above could not merely know they were talking to friends below, but they were also perfectly certain to whom they were talking. The mediums made a tremendous "hit" in Clinton county's capital. Two members of the legal professionwhich is notoriously skeptical-became in fatuated with the apparent reality of these conversations which were being daily carried on between the two worlds. These men, J. T. Hockman and Asa H. Bolden took up with the new fad and were soon enjoying the pleasure of conversing with absent friends and relatives. Among others, they talked with Mr. H. H. Bradley and his legal adviser, Judge Joseph C. Suit. LEARNED OF THE WILL. In a conversation with the spirit of Judge Suit, the supposed fact that his former client, Bradley, had died without leaving a will was touched upon. Immediately, the ethereal jurist entered a positive denial of the statement. He said he had made a will think the rates charged in Indianapolis are for Mr. Bradley and that the document was duly attested by the signatures of John A. Petty and T. C. Parrish, wellknown residents of Frankfort. The judge further declared that the missing document ought to be easily found among his papers in his office safe.

Little time was lost in prosecuting a vigorous search among the papers and effects of the late Judge Suit. Remarkable to relate, the will was found and it had been signed by Messrs. Petty and Parrish, just as detailed in the spirit conversation carried on through the mediumistic trumpet. Mr. Petty, one of the witnesses to the will. had died in the meantime, but his signature was pronounced genuine by a large number of Frankfort citizens who had known him intimately during his lifetime. Mr. Parrish is still iving and at once corroborated the terms of the document, at the same time throwing a great deal of light upon the will itself and upon the circumstances under which he was called upon to act as a witness. The will disposed of Mr. Bradley's estate in entire consonance with his oft-repeated determination while in the flesh. A widow's portion was left to Mrs. Bradley, $1,000 each to two of the decedent's brothers, while the balance was devised to the Frankfort Commandery. Knights Templars. Alexander Given and Cor. David A. Coulter, the latter a member of the state board of monument regents, were named as executors of the instru-

The Knights Templars had their attention called to this miraculously restored will by Messrs. Hockman and Bolden, who entered into a contract providing that they were to receive for their legal services one-half of whatever sum they might succeed in recovering for the commandery by a suit at law, based upon the discovered will. The document was filed for probate and a suit immediately commenced to have it declared genuine and of full force and effect. After a lengthy and very exciting trial, Special Judge Rabb decided the will to be genuine Upon that finding the widow of Mr. Bradlew-now Mrs. Isaac Miller-gave the necessary bond and sued out an appeal from Judge Rabb's decision to the Supreme Court of the State.

MUCH SPECULATION. Naturally, a great deal of speculation upon this remarkable and puzzling case has been indulged in by citizens of Frankfort, and, although the mediums and their trumpet have been industriously trained upon the spirit world, no answer has as yet July 31. Mr. Henderson has been organizing | been received to the all-important question, "Why did Judge Suit, who was at the head of the commandery, Knights Templars, when he drew up that will, and who husband's estate. convention, which convenes in this city, lifetime, to make known the contents will be composed of delegates from the of this last testament of Mr. Bradvarious branches. Since the appeal has been prosecuted from the judgment of the lower court, an effort has been made to compromise with the commandery by turning over to it a certain portion of the property of Mr. Bradley, but thus far the "pound of flesh" has been strictly demanded, and the outcome by Governor Mount, Mayor Taggart and of this most remarkable and mysterious case is awaited with a very great deal of anxiety by air, and Mrs. Miller and the especial beneficiaries named in the will recovered in such an uncanny manner, to say nothing of the citizens of Frankfort in who take a keen interest in the

The real fact of the case is claimed to be that nobody was scared or ran from the scene of the proposed "well shooting" at Broad Ripple except the reporter himself. It is said he was so badly frightened that he grabbed his camera and scurried away to a point of safety, leaving behind him the young lady to whom he was acting as escort. Several hundred people who were present and understood perfectly well that the horses were not attached to the wagon loaded with nitroglycerin, are laughing over the young man's discomfiture.
